

Steps in looking for the exact Survey Sites without being a victim of a scam.

Contributed by Webmaster

By Moni Arora

People all over the world want to work from home. It is possible to do. They see it being done and wonder why they can't find ways to legitimately make money from home like others do. All they find are scams that look too good to be true and usually are. One of the most popular ways to make money from home is by filling out surveys for cash. Companies out there will pay you money for answering all kinds of questions. These companies need this information in order to fine tune their products and advertising campaigns to fit the needs of buyers. As you can probably guess, sites that sound too good to be true most probably are. They promise big payoffs but in reality all they do is create a lot of work, jam email boxes with tons of surveys and the need to sign up for hundreds of different sites that will in turn flood your inbox more and in the end only pay a few pennies, or offer gifts that you have to build up huge numbers of surveys to get.

/>

There are a lot of company's that require a certain balance before they will even pay you. Because you can easily get caught up with the switch of needing to purchase products in order to get paid at the end of the surveys they send, knowing what to look for to avoid being scammed by these companies is even harder. You are so desperate to get paid for it the temptation to buy the products is so great you end up spending more than the survey is worth, by the time you have gone through a twenty page survey. They neglect to inform you that you aren't required to go that far in the survey to receive compensation for it. All you have to do is fill out the questionnaire part consisting of the pages prior to the offers. Unfortunately not all of these companies are true to their word in that regard either. Those surveys that could not attract buyers get held and don't get approved

It can be very confusing for the average person and because paid for survey companies are so popular they are springing up everywhere. It can be hard distinguish the good ones from the bad ones from an initial examination regardless of how meticulous you are about checking them out. Usually the only way to know is to sign up, work the system and sometimes waste your time for a week or two until you discover the truth. It's not always easy to tell which company is worth working for. Two important points to consider when looking for a paid survey site:

Read the TOS: The TOS (Terms of Service) will tell you up front if the company you are signing up with sells information to third parties. Make sure they strictly prohibit the sale of your information to others or you will have even more mail in your inbox and possibly your home mail box as well.

Stay away from companies which offer prizes or points instead of monetary compensation. You really want to make a lot of money. That is the only way to make a fair living from taking surveys. Payment in other items like prizes can be nice if you aren't interested in earning an income but just want exciting items arriving in your mail from time to time, but for those actually interested in working from home cash is the only payment that makes sense.

You can make money when you take paid surveys. You will not get rich, and it is actually work that needs to be completed, but you can get paid to work from home if you know what to look for in a paid survey company.

Over time; Moni Arora has signed up to innumerable paid surveys, focus groups and product test assignments. He has evaluated and expresses his opinion on the top paid survey websites at <http://www.PaidSurveysReviewGuru.com>